

The scope of international group litigation continues to expand and every jurisdiction has its own set of constantly evolving rules. Morrison v. National Australia Bank prompted the U.S. to change its policy regarding international class actions, barring investors who purchase securities on a foreign exchange from participating in U.S. class actions.

As a result, investors must now seek out foreign jurisdictions as a venue for their complaints and bring suits under non-US law in foreign courts. This requires a comprehensive understanding of the legal mechanisms for handling group actions in foreign jurisdictions.

Optimize efficiency in addressing complex global securities litigation

FRT Global is a monitoring and claims recovery service that leverages our global expertise and experience. It is designed to assist institutional investors in navigating group securities litigation across the globe. Our team of claims recovery professionals has the insight and knowledge to assist in successful monitoring and claims recovery of international group action settlements.

FRT offers the most comprehensive coverage of global class actions

The Morrison case changed the landscape for international group action recoveries. Through FRT Global, you will:

- Stay informed on the latest developments in international claims processing across our covered global jurisdictions
- Reduce the risk of missing potentially significant recovery opportunities outside the U.S.
- Tap into our expertise and guidance in navigating through the complexity of global group actions and make informed decisions on your participation in these cases

The FRT Global Service takes a tiered approach in order to meet each client's international group action litigation needs

Tier 1 — Monitoring & Research Element

We provide you with access to detailed information and customized guidance based on the requirements of each jurisdiction and country in our coverage list.

- Active monitoring of international group actions and email alerts that notify you of applicable cases and potential eligibility
- Using your data, we'll create an opportunity analysis detailing case eligibility and the required steps for each country
- Receive country profiles that provide insight into the group claims process in different jurisdictions and the local players involved, including regular updates of country-specific requirements for participation
- For actions with multiple competing organizers, FRT provides visuals to easily compare organizers, litigation strategies and participation requirements
- Ongoing insight through quarterly newsletters and private webinar briefings

Tier 2 — Data Analysis and Participation Support

Upon identifying eligibility, FRT will collaborate with the client through evaluation, participation and resolution of the entire litigation process.

- FRT will provide loss/damage calculations, research and support necessary to make informed decisions about international participation
- If you choose to participate in any group action, FRT will facilitate connections with the local processing agents and case organizers and provide support throughout the litigation process
- Your FRT analyst is available any time to provide ongoing participation support and custom research requests on particular cases or jurisdictions
